Masala Chai

Tea plants have grown wild in the Assam region since antiquity and many have viewed tea as a herbal medicine rather than a recreational beverage.

Masala Chai or “Mixed spice tea” is a blend of black tea, and a mixture of aromatic Indian herbs and spices, which originated in the Indian subcontinent and was adopted by the British East India Company. The tea was blended, sometimes with milk, and served hot or cold. There is no fixed recipe or preparation for masala chai and so each one should be unique with its own intense essence and flavour.

Monsooned Malabar

a process applied to coffee beans The harvested beans are exposed to the monsoon rain and winds for a period of about three to four months, causing the beans to swell and lose the original acidity, resulting in a smooth brew with a practically neutral pH balance. The coffee is unique to the Malabar Coast of Karnataka and Kerala. The name Monsooned Malabar is derived from exposure to the monsoon winds of the Malabar coast.

The blend is heavy bodied, pungent, and considered to be dry with a musty, chocolatey aroma and notes of spice and nuts.
