In 1795 Reverend Samuel Henshall patented the first corkscrew, heralding a golden age of bottle-opening ingenuity. Amongst those that followed were the Partial Puller, Eyebrow Screw, Speed Worm, Perpetual Screw, Self-Puller, London Rack and Four Finger Pull. But for cork-extracting royalty, only the Four-Post King's Screw would do.

Here at Hawksmoor, we have a dedicated team of 'wine guys' who lovingly shape and craft the list at each restaurant. A boozy rabble in Claret stained T-shirts, they dedicate themselves to making sure you're completely satisfied with your choice of wine. The Hawksmoor Air Street favourites page is a regularly changing showcase of wines that are interesting, fun and go exceptionally well with our food. They're all drinking beautifully right now.

Biecher & Schaal, 'Sommerberg' Grand Cru Riesling 2012

42.50

Elegant and balanced, this stunning riesling hails from the steep south-facing Sommerberg vineyard of Alsace, France. Displaying intense flavours of peach, citrus and honey alongside a smoky minerality, this is perfect with richer styles of fish such as our smoked salmon or Turbot.

Ghost Corner, 'The Bowline' Sauvignon Blanc / Semillon 2012

47.50

The mysterious landscape at the southernmost tip of Africa was the inspiration for this wine. More than 130 ships have come to rest in these treacherous waters where compass readings show no deviation between magnetic and true north. The content of this bottle is just as wondrous, expressing distinct green fig, asparagus and green pepper flavours. A sheer delight.

Michele Satta, 'Cavaliere' Sangiovese 2005

60.00

Michele has been a rising star in Italian wine circles for many years and is now shining brighter than ever with the 2005 Cavaliere. This 100% Sangiovese strikes the perfect balance between primary red cherry fruit and the classic Tuscan nuances of fresh cigar tobacco, wild herbs and dark chocolate. Try this with our D-Rump or Ribeye Steaks.

Ten Minutes by Tractor, 'McCutcheon' Pinot Noir 2011

Defined by place, TMBT comprises of three vineyards, each ten minutes by tractor apart. One of these, the McCutcheon vineyard in Australia's picturesque Mornington Peninsula, provides optimum growing conditions for the delicate and temperamental Pinot Noir grape. This wine delivers beautiful red fruit characters coupled with cooking spices and makes a perfect match for meatier fish and our fillet steaks alike.

Legend has it that the Benedictine monk Dom Pérignon was the first to put the sparkle into wine – ‘Come quickly, I am drinking the stars!’ he is said to have exclaimed after his first sip in 1693. But it turns out that decades earlier the English were making wine ‘drink quick and lively, with a speedy vanishing nittiness which evaporates with a sparkling and whizzing noise’.

‘Claret? Who ever thought of drinking claret in Paris?’

All the best Bordeaux goes to London. It is well known that we have bespoken all the prime vintages till the year 1860. Claret, don’t think of asking for claret? The claret in Paris will give you the cholera.’ The Court Journal: Court Circular & Fashionable Gazette, 1833

In Michael Palin's Ripping Yarns, a succession of upper-class English army officers in Raj-era India shoot themselves after being caught out passing the port in the wrong direction. If you ever find yourself dining with our country's great and good and don't want to meet a similar end, here's what you need to know.

Once decanted, pass the port to the left, pouring a glass for your neighbour on your right before you do so. It should continue on its clockwise journey until it's finished. If the decanter does stall on its way, it's considered very bad form to ask for it. Instead, ask the person hogging the decanter: "Do you know the Bishop of Norwich?" If they are au fait with port etiquette they will immediately realise their faux pas and pass along the decanter with an apology. If not, and they answer in the negative, you should say: "He's a terribly good chap, but he always forgets to pass the port."

The poor Bishop in question? Henry Bathurst, Bishop of Norwich from 1805-1837, who in his nineties used to fall asleep and fail to pass the port.
