Formerly known as Peking, Beijing is surprisingly only China’s second most populous city behind Shanghai.

乌鲁木齐市

HARBIN

📍Heilongjiang 🧑10.8 million

Having the most bitterly cold winters among major Chinese cities, Harbin is heralded as the Ice City for its well-known winter tourism and recreations.

Macau was administered by the Portuguese Empire and its inheritor states from the mid-16th century until late 1999, when it constituted the last remaining European colony in Asia. Local cooking in Macau consists of a blend of Cantonese and Portuguese cuisines. Many unique dishes resulted from the spice blends used by the wives of Portuguese sailors to replicate European dishes. Its ingredients and seasonings include those from Europe, South America, Africa, India, and Southeast Asia, as well as local Chinese ingredients.

Consists of 3 main regions: Kowloon, Hong Kong Island and The New Territories. A land of juxtaposition, 260 islands but also more skyscrapers than anywhere else in the world - twice that of New York! Millions of citizens leading everyday existences besides more Rolls Royces and Billionaires per capita. Perhaps the greatest foodie destination in the world.

Shanghai cuisine, also known as Hu cuisine (滬菜), is a popular style of Chinese food. Complex and developed, it takes “colour, aroma and taste” as its elements like other Chinese regional cuisines. It emphasises in particular the use of seasonings, the quality of raw ingredients and original flavours.

Chinese calligraphy is exhibited most prominently at the National Museum in Tiananmen Square, where they aim to educate about the arts of China. The deep history and heritage of this City is reflected in the fact that it is home to 7 Unesco World Heritage Sites, however, the pace with which this city is moving into the modern world with a 21st century infrastructure on an incredibly grand scale is truly impressive. When you go, do not forget to try their infamous Peking Duck. You won’t regret it!

Harbin, nicknamed “Ice City” due to its freezingly cold winter, is notable for its various styles of beautiful ice and ice sculptures from December to March every year. Besides being well known for its historical Russian legacy, the city serves as an important gateway in Sino-Russian trade today, containing a sizable population of Russian diaspora.
