LUCKENBOOTH

[ˈlʌkənˌbuːθ] NOUN Scottish archaic

1. a booth or shop capable of being locked up
2. the name given to an area of a town with such booths

We take our name from the timber fronted tenement buildings which existed across the street from us from 1440 until around 1817. Their varied frontages and roof lines formed a picturesque feature on the High Street and housed the very first shops in the city with ground level lockable booths (or Luckenbooths).

We are working with our partners at Cheval Old Town Chambers to continue this tradition with a curated range of local gifts available to purchase in their lobby, alongside a selection of our favourite bottles from our friends at The Bon Vivant's Companion on Thistle Street.
